The statement talks about employment generation being a major concern. Hence, budget has to be allocated towards it. This eliminates options A, B and E.

Option D is incorrect due to use of schemes which does not fit in the first blank.

Option C is correct as both the blanks fit in well contextually and grammatically.

Hence, option C is correct.

117. A

Option B: Both light and cautioned do not fit in the blanks.

Option C: None of the three words fit in with the statement.

Option D: Repudiated and indiscretion are opposite of what is needed.

Option E: Bright in the first blank does not make any sense.

Option A: All the three words are a perfect fit.

Hence, option A is correct.

118. D

Option A: The first blank requires a verb while profit is a noun. The tone of the statement is positive and hence shock is incorrect.

Option B: rejoicing does not fit in grammatically. The article 'a' before the second blank implies the word should be a consonant which is not the case here. Lesser is opposite of what is needed.

Option C: None of the three words fit in with the statement.

Option E: None of the three words fit in with the statement.

Option D: All the three words are a perfect fit.

Hence, option D is correct.

119. E

Option B: The words partially recognized are grammatically correct but do not make sense. Also, bust means completely broken while as per the statement, there is a decrease in investments. Accretion means build-up of something and is meaningless.

Option C: None of the three words fit in with the statement.

Option A: All the three words are a perfect fit.

Option D: All the three words are a perfect fit.

Hence, option E is correct.

120. C

Option A: The word while is a conjunction whereas the middle blank needs an adjective. This renders the statement meaningless and incorrect.

Option B: Easily is an adjective but is contextually incorrect and does not make sense.

Option D: None of the three words fit in with the statement.

Option E: None of the three words fit in with the statement.

Option C: All the three words are a perfect fit.

Hence, option C is correct.

121. B

The use of with indicates that total eclipse, blue moon and super moon are all occurring together. Hence, options D and E can be eliminated.

Out of options A, B and C-

Option A: Blank two talks about this being a common event which does not sound logical. Hence, this is incorrect.

Option C: Blank two talks about this being the only event. This is contextually incorrect and also grammatically absurd.

Option B is correct as both the blanks fit in well contextually and grammatically.

Hence, option B is correct.

122. A

The statement conveys that the government backed down after criticism. Logically, the criticism had to be serious if it caused the government to change its decision. This eliminates options C and E.

Looking at the other options:

Option B: Give is grammatically incorrect due to incorrect tense usage.

Option D: Reported is irrelevant and illogical.

Option A is correct as both the blanks fit in well contextually and grammatically.

Hence, option A is correct.

123. C

A bubble in the stock market is caused by the markets being too high. Thus, options A and D can be eliminated.

Also, the statement talks about the risk to investors due to the possibility of a correction. Hence, option E gets eliminated due to illogical blank two.

Out of options B and C, B is grammatically incorrect.

Option C is correct as both the blanks fit in well contextually and grammatically.

Hence, option C is correct.

124. E

Here, the statement talks about petitioners using the case of Gandhi being against the profiling of Indians in South Africa in the context of Aadhaar. Since, Gandhi was against profiling, we can eliminate option A.

Option D is incorrect due to the use of plagiarized which means copying/falsification and is out of context.

Both Options B and C fit in well contextually and grammatically.

Hence, option E is correct.

125. D

Too high a price to pay implies something being offered in return for another.

Option A: Selling is contextually and grammatically incorrect.

Option B: Both the blanks are incorrect contextually and grammatically incorrect.

Option C: Both the blanks are incorrect contextually and grammatically incorrect.

Option E: Forced is incorrect contextually.

Option D is correct as both the blanks fit in well contextually and grammatically.
